

Mark Pastor Senior Director Market Development, Security and Content
Seagate

Mark Pastor is the Senior Director Market Development for Security and Content at Seagate Technology. In this role, Mark is responsible for defining and developing markets and business opportunities in data security and digital content markets.

Since joining Seagate in 1997, Mark has led the business, planning, and market development efforts for several key initiatives including the development and launch of LTO tape technology, Seagate's entrance into the handheld hard drive market, and the development of Seagate's security and content business initiative. Prior to establishing his current role Mark was responsible for portfolio management of Seagate's advanced market concepts.

Prior to joining Seagate Mark was a business unit general manager at a leading manufacturer of commercial printers and imaging products. Before that Mark held several management positions in sales, marketing, R&D, and operations.

Mark holds a BS in computer engineering from the University of California at Los Angeles
